

Emergency Sale!

We Need Room and Money for Holiday Goods

An emergency calls for quick action. Quick action that's what we after just now. We want $3000.00 above what we would do in our regular business in the next seven days. To do this extra business we realize something radical must be done, something to force quick action, so prices are going to be cut, on nearly everything in our Big Ready-to-Wear Department on the second floor. Here's the biggest stock of Women's Ready-to-wear garments between McKeesport and Uniontown, and there's none better in either city; new, stylish, clean up-to-date goods. The warm open winter has caused us to accumulate an enormous stock of ready-to-wear goods. We are willing to reduce the prices wonderfully to create the extra business. We are right in the midst of Christmas Business--Need all our time and help for the Holiday trade--but for Seven Days you will get these wonderful values to induce you to buy at once.

THESE MONEY SAVING PRICES WILL LAST

One Week--Seven Days--Beginning Wednesday Morning, December 8, and Closing Wednesday Night, December 15

This store will be doing extra emergency quick action business. Christmas is just around the corner. We have got to get ready for the last ten days rush, and this emergency CLEARANCE SALE IS IMPERATIVE. Be sure to come--Unprecedented values in HIGHEST QUALITY MERCHANDISE.

Commendable Economy.

In keeping with the spirit of the times the Secretary of the Treasury has scaled down his estimate of appropriations for next year which he submitted to Congress yesterday. This estimate is $123,000,000 less than the estimates submitted for 1910 a year ago and $163,000,000 less than the appropriations made last year.

While this retrenchment is not so very large, considered Nationally, the proportion carried on down all the way through the State, the county, the borough, the township and individually, will accomplish wonders. The era of extravagance which is sapping the National vitality must be checked in some manner and the National Government does well to set the example.

EVANGELISTS WILL CONDUCT MORNING SERVICES THIS WEEK

Morning services were started this morning by Evangelists E. E. Hendrick, and A. L. Carter, at the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church. These services will be held every morning this week at 10 o'clock. Last night at the services there was a good crowd present. Rev. Hendrick spoke on "Ruth and Naomi," and explained the importance of companionship, such as that which existed between these Bible characters. The sermon was one of the best. Inspirational singing was conducted by Mr. Carter.

ADOLPH'S FOOTWEAR

Adolph's Men's shoes are not only the smartest shoes you'll see but they give the longest and most satisfactory wear. The ever increasing business at Adolph's proves both statements. Adolph's shoes are copied from the best Metropolitan custom made work, and the models are closely followed in ever particular. That accounts for Adolph's style. The materials which enter into the making of Adolph's shoes are carefully selected from the best leathers on the market and put together by skilled labor. They are left on the lasts to thoroughly season and dry out and that is why Adolph's shoes have the reputation of holding their original shape until they are ready to be discarded. Adolph's men's $2.95 and $3.45 shoes are in all leathers, including Patent colt, genuine gun metal calf, vicci kid, russian tan and wax calf. There are innumerable lasts and shapes, so that a particular man is sure of finding just what he fancies in button, lace or blucher cut, in the very size and width he is in the habit of wearing. Adolph's fitters are skilled and experienced and the quick, courteous and pleasant service will be to your liking. Make it a pair of Adolph's this season and then you'll know why the demand for Adolph's shoes is a ways increasing.

Words and Music of a Frank Daniels Song Hit

The "Belles of Brittany" at Daly's Theatre is the big musical hit of the Christmas season. Frank Daniels is in the leading role, and the very best song in this big show is "The Ingle Nock," a love ballad. The words and music of this catchy melody will be given free with next Sunday's New York World, by arrangement with Francis Day and Hunter, publishers of the score.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time."

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the way some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out: 'Who is it?'

"'Abe Lincoln,' was the reply. 'I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two.'

"It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

He Didn't Bet

"A man in my county," said a Kansas congressman, "was always anxious to bet on his game of checkers. One time he was about to play a game for $10 with a fellow called Three Fingers Jack. Suddenly one of his friends exclaimed:

"Don't bet, Charlie. Don't you know that fellow wore off two fingers playing checkers? That's why he's called Three Fingers Jack."

"That settled it. The bet was never made. A man who had worn off two fingers by brushing them up and down the checkerboard was too much for my friend."—Kansas City Journal.

A Bitter Disappointment.

"When I was in Paris," remarked the collector of curios, "I discovered in a bookstore a volume which I knew at first glance to be of extraordinary value. I could scarcely believe my good luck. Breathless, I inquired the price of the dealer. Just think of it! I could have had that treasure for a song!"

"Well, why didn't you get it?"

"Never could find a note in my life," cried the collector, bursting into tears.—New York Times.

"It seems to me," said the American chief as he watched the white man's encroachments, "that all my property very soon will be a mental reservation."—Judge.

Fred Fielding a sailor from the U. S. S. Connecticut who has been visiting his niece, Mrs. Charles Bromwich of Washington avenue, left for San Francisco, Cal., where he will continue his service in the U. S. Navy.

Old Men's Memories. The late Sarah Orne Jewett lived a great part of her life in South Berwick, and the quaint Maine characters of her native town interested her profoundly.

"Miss Jewett at the Mayflower club in Boston once illustrated aptly the unreliable quality of old people's memories."

"A young minister," she said, "born in South Berwick, was called in his maturity to one of the churches of the town. Everybody welcomed him. He had been away nearly thirty years and the oldest inhabitant's welcome was the warmest of all."

"The minister, however, sitting on his stick, said in a high, tremulous voice to the young man:

"And you're Master Johnny Greenwood! Little Johnny Greenwood! How time do fly! Why, it seems only yesterday I traipsed in to the courthouse to see your poor old grandfather hanged."

"Everybody looked shocked. So there was a blot on the Greenwood family 'scurcheon,' eh? But the young man said calmly:

"My good old friend, your memory is partly right and partly wrong. My grandfather was murdered, not hanged. It was two brothers of the name of Alden who paid the penalty of his murder."

"Well, that's what I said," crowed the octogenarian. "That's just what I said, ain't it?"—Exchange.

Ants Are Six Eared.

In the matter of some of their sense organs the ants are more than ordinarily endowed. Strange as it may seem, each ant has at least six ears. Aside from this multiplicity of ears, they are located in just about the queerest place imaginable—on the legs. They seem deaf to all sounds made by the vibration of the air, but detect the slightest possible vibrations of solid material. This is supposed to be to their advantage in that such things as approaching footsteps tell more of the possibility of danger than such sounds as are transmitted through the air. So sensitive are their feet that they detect the impact of a small bird shot dropped on the table from a height of about six inches and about fourteen feet distant from an artificial nest placed at the other end of the table.—St. Nicholas.

The Characteristic National Meal.

It is not only in Scotland that breakfast is the characteristic national meal. Travel where you may, the first meal of the day is the one that strikes the foreign note, luncheon and dinner having gradually absorbed cosmopolitan qualities that are not even confined to hotels. But you never feel so much of an Englishman as when Switzerland gives you rolls and butter and honey and nothing more with your coffee or when France makes this into one exquisite crumbling "croissant" with an inch or two from a yard long loaf, or when Denmark adds cream instead of milk to the coffee and a dangerous piece of pastry to the black bread and round white roll. Yet our English breakfast became an institution only in the eighteenth century. Before that only royalty breakfasted off meat bread and cheese and ale. The commoner, such as Pepys, took merely a morning draft of buttered ale.—London Chronicle.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than in other diseases put together, and until a few years ago was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Chase & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHASE & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Ready For Use.
As usual, the children were very hungry and were waiting patiently for father to fill the plates and pass them around. Father, however, was busily engaged in conversation and missed little Marion. After every one had begun eating the child grew desperate and interrupted his father:

IS GENIUS DEVISABLE?

By HARRIET COWLEY.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Whoever is born with superior mental powers must pay a penalty. Such persons are not satisfied to work in a common field. They struggle for a higher one to which admittance is denied them until their fitness for it is recognized. And how many a "mute inglorious Milton" has lived and died without any such recognition while his untalented brother has won a high position! The same is often true of one who loves madly. The very intensity of his person robs him of his coolness. He frets and fumes while a rival—unmoved by sentiment lays siege to the maiden and wins her by regular approaches.

When John Gregory went to college he expected to lead his fellow students as he had led his schoolmates and afterward to lead the world as he had led his university associates. The only other being he loved except himself was Bertha Avery, and he loved her far better than himself. It was Bertha who was accountable for her lover's self admiration. She recognized his superior endowments and called his attention to them. Therefore believing that through them he would win and hold her love, came to see great store by them.

John was graduated at the head of his class. Not only this, but he was the college literary light of his time, editor of the university magazine and winner of all the prizes given for essays. Indeed, so marked was his success as a college scribbler that he determined to enter the field of literature. He was never quite sure that Bertha loved him—indeed, she had never told him that she did—and he did not expect to make the conquest of her heart till he could lay a laurel wreath at her feet.

John entered his chosen field encouraged by all. There was no doubt that he had very superior literary faculties. He entered the editorial service of a magazine for an income, proposing to write out of office hours. He soon concluded that to win the success he coveted he must furnish something in an original vein. To swim in the great ocean of the commonplace did not please him. The first important story he wrote was a satire on certain fads of the day. He had resolved not to embarrass his employers by offering them any of his work, so he sent his satire to another magazine. It was returned with the ladorsement that it was too good for the class of readers of that particular magazine.

Meanwhile as editor he was accepting stories of one Jefferson Spangler. They were not to be considered as within the realms of literature, but they seemed to please people who had little or no literary taste. Spangler was a connection of Bertha Avery's, and she had introduced him to John, asking him to help one of whose literary ability she had a poor opinion, but who was a very "amiable, deserving fellow." John published some of the young man's productions partly to favor Bertha and partly because they helped to widen the circle of the magazine. At least so thought the editor in chief and owner.

While John was experimenting with different novelties to attract the attention of the public to his work he maintained a sort of indefinite understanding with Miss Avery. He would not ask for her till he had met the coveted success. He always had something under way or finished which he hoped would make the expected hit. Bertha encouraged him to push on and he would eventually reap the reward of his perseverance. But, though many of his works were recognized by a few as scintillations of genius, only those of which he himself had an indifferent opinion found their way into print. One or two stories of marked originality were published and attracted some favorable comment, but not enough to fix the attention of the public on the writer.

Meanwhile Jefferson Spangler was plowing in the field of mediocrity. In time he published a novel which met with a moderate success. John Gregory, surprised, read it, or all of it he could force himself to read, and wondered. But what was his chagrin when the owners of the magazine with which he was connected told him that the next issue would contain a likeness and notice of the "new literary light" and that they had decided to "boom" him.

While Gregory had been trying to dash in upon the public by a brilliant stroke, humble Spangler had been slowly crawling up upon it. He possessed a homely faculty of portraying the common events entering into the lives of ordinary people. Having reached a point where capital concluded that it could make his work profitable, he had nothing more to do but wield his pen. Capital did the rest. Within a few years publishers were competing for his next novel and offering him fancy royalties for it.

The next chapter in John Gregory's life was the receipt of a letter from the girl he adored announcing her engagement to Spangler. Since John had never made a formal proposal for her hand, there was no occasion for her entering into any explanation or apology. She did say, however, that she was not to marry her ideal, but people never did that.

John Gregory is getting old and is a bachelor. He is second assistant editor of the magazine that "boomed" his rival, without prospect of ever attaining any greater prosperity. Different opinions are given as to the cause or causes of his not having succeeded, the most common of which is that "he flew too high."

TO HEAD SCHOOL SYSTEM.

First Woman to Be Chosen Superintendent of Chicago Schools.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, former principal of the Chicago Normal school, has recently been chosen by the school board of the Windy City as superintendent of schools to succeed E. G. Cooley, resigned.

This is the first time a woman in the United States has held such a position, and Mrs. Young by her recent appointment has been promoted from a position paying $5,000 to one to which a salary of $10,000 is attached.

In an interview the newly elected superintendent expressed her pleasure at being the first woman to hold such a position and outlined her policy as one of unification of all interests. "When I first began teaching," she said in speaking of her work, "I made the mistake of supposing that my line of study and reading outside my regular work. I found out, however, that a continual press of extra work and social engagements not only rushed me in everything I did, but left me no time for recreation. I then adopted the resolution that three evenings in every week should be devoted to study. This rule I have religiously lived up to and have found it an enormous benefit." As Mrs. Young is a trifle over sixty years of age, her experience in teaching extends over a long period. "I manage," Mrs. Young concluded, "to put in a pretty full day. The alarm clock is my constant bedside companion and arouses me every morning at 6 o'clock sharp. I utilize what time there is before breakfast on odd tasks and directly after the meal leave for school. There I am busy until the afternoon, when I return home and take my daily recreation in my gasoline runabout.

"No; I am not yet a speeder or a 'joy rider,'" she laughed in answer to a query. "I am merely after the air and do not want the whole street. My evenings I devote to my engagements or, as I have told you, to study in my quarters at home, where I have a regular office fitted out with a roller top desk and letter files."

When asked to what sort of study these evening hours were devoted Mrs. Young said her first efforts had been in mathematics. This was followed by specializations in fields of literature. She then became interested in ethics and followed this by work in logic, metaphysics and philosophy, which last she regards as the most engrossing of all subjects and as involving all the rest.

The Captain Settled the Account Before His Vessel Sailed.

In Burnaby's "Travels in America in 1793," a book quite popular during the latter part of the eighteenth century, the following incident is related: The captain of a British man-of-war cruising off the Massachusetts coast left his wife in Boston. On one of his visits to port she came down to the wharf to meet him, and she was saluted as a true and loving sailor's wife deserved. This violation of law was at once reported, and the captain was brought before the magistrate and sentenced to be publicly whipped. There was no getting out of it, and the captain submitted quite gracefully. Just before the departure of his ship he wrote an elaborate entertainment to which all of the magistrates were invited. After the festivities were over and every one had shaken hands with the captain and was going over the side the magistrates were seized by the arm and stripped to the waist. Each one was led to the gangway, where a vigorous boatswain gave him thirty-nine lashes on the bare back and then hustled him over into a boat amid the cheers of the whole ship's company.
